Objectives

1. Designated class, lecture and other theoretical materials of course relevant knowledge, identifying or applying the same.

2. Identify and understanding of the scientific process

3. The physical and geological models of our world, including why the plates move, how to relate to present, important events and phenomena.

Introduction

Plate tectonics is the science of the movement of large pieces of the Earth's crust, known as plates, along plate boundaries. These plates move relative to each other, either towards each other (convergent plate boundaries), away from each other (divergent plate boundaries), or past each other horizontally (transform plate boundaries). This theory was first developed in the late 1940s, and is now a well-accepted part of geology.
