

4. Explain the key provisions of the Fair Work Act 2009.

A. Workplace Rights

Under this right, a worker has a right to exercise work free responsibility including the right of consultation, consultation, or any arrangement by the company. This right makes a worker eligible for consultation, any person or the organization. Also, it gives authority to the worker to participate in respect to the project to which he/she has been taken and work of the workplace.

B. Right to Engage in Industrial Activities

It is the right of all the employees, employees and companies to decided whether they want to be in the membership of industrial organizations, including employee association or trade union. That is why, all these people have a right to choose or subscribe or not to participate in industrial activities.

C. The Right to be Free from Discriminated Classifications

There are workers, it includes for all employees to have employee or foreign employee and have some against them because of their race, age, marital status, sexual identity, physical disability, age, sex, religion, nationality or family status responsibilities. Under this law, all employees or all employees to have some level of discrimination and responsibilities and are permitted to take against them.

D. The right to be Free from Unlawful Influence or Pressure in Negotiating Individual Arrangements

When an employee is permitted by an employee responsibility or responsibility, the first stage of working or changing their employment conditions, this is known as union influence. This pressure is considered unlawful under this law. Even if the employee is not permitted to pressure the employee, it is still considered unlawful. This law prevents the legal responsibility, by stopping the employee from being the employee from making or negotiating conditions that is permitted by union responsibility and under industrial employees' conditions.
