Biological Response Modifiers in Human Oncology and Immunology Andor Szentivanyi,2013-11-11 The topic of biological response modifiers has attracted the attention of many biomedical investigators including immunologists oncologists pharmacologists microbiologists and biochemists as well as clinical practitioners of medicine This has occurred mainly because of the realization that the complex system of cellular and humoral interactions culminating in a productive immune response is under exquisite regulatory control for normal immune responses and that loss of control may markedly influence the capability of a host to respond in a productive manner to the numerous immunologic insults encountered in the environment Furthermore biological response modification is considered by many to be a natural offshoot of the relatively new application of immunotherapy to cancer It is widely recognized that immunotherapy was practiced at the end of the last century and the beginning of this century when it was recognized that microbial infections were caused by distinct species of bacteria and that passive administration of serum containing antibody to these microbes or their products could in many cases favorably influence the outcome of an infectious process Medical Microbiology E-Book Patrick R.
