Modeling the Role of the Spanish Government in the 1990s

Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical fitness of 10-year-old children. The study was conducted in a primary school in the city of Bursa, Turkey. The study group consisted of 20 children (10 boys and 10 girls) who were randomly selected from the 10-year-old children in the school. The children were divided into two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not participate in any physical activity program, while the experimental group participated in a 12-week training program. The physical fitness of the children was measured at the beginning and at the end of the 12-week period. The measurements included maximum heart rate, maximum oxygen consumption, maximum power, maximum speed, and maximum distance. The results showed that the experimental group had significantly higher values for all five measurements at the end of the 12-week period compared to the control group. The results suggest that a 12-week training program can improve the physical fitness of 10-year-old children.

From 1990 to 1992, the average number of children per woman was 2.1, compared with 2.3 in 1980 and 2.5 in 1970. The decline in fertility was most pronounced among women with a high school or college education, who had an average of 1.6 children in 1990, compared with 2.0 in 1980 and 2.2 in 1970. Women with a high school or college education also had a higher percentage of children who were born to unmarried women, which may explain the decline in fertility. The percentage of children born to unmarried women increased from 10% in 1980 to 15% in 1990, and from 12% in 1970 to 18% in 1990.
