Perspectives and Guidelines on Food Legislation Jessica Vapnek, Melvin Spreij, 2005-01-01 The increasing globalization of food trade and the harmonization of food standards and food safety rules have led to significant changes in the international and national regulatory frameworks for food There is an increasing recognition of the need to integrate and improve coordination of regulatory activities among national and international bodies for better protection of human animal and plant life and health without creating unnecessary barriers to trade In addition catastrophic outbreaks of food borne disease have sparked increasing attention to the regulatory frameworks for food safety and food trade in the global arena These developments have given rise to new legislative needs National regulatory frameworks have to be adjusted to meet international and regional obligations while the distribution of responsibilities for the food sector requires rigorous review The present text draws on FAO's experience in providing technical assistance to governments developing new food laws and regulations setting out and examining the many elements of the national system which should be taken into account in a comprehensive review of national regulatory frameworks for food Towards that end the text offers concrete recommendations for the preparation of a basic national food law including three variants of a new model food law

Food habits and consumption in developing countries Adel P. den Hartog, Wija A. van Staveren, Inge D. Brouwer, 2023-09-04 During the last decade the food and nutrition situation in developing countries has changed dramatically For better or worse urbanization and globalization have altered the diet and nutrition in both rural and urban areas In many developing countries a persistent level of under nutrition exists both in rural areas and in urban slums due to less access to food needed for an active and healthy life On the other hand over nutrition or eating too much has emerged among the middle income groups It is essential to have a better understanding of how people deal with their food in developing countries in order to plan and implement food and nutrition programmes This manual deals with the process of changing food habits and consumption patterns in developing countries Nutritional implications together with practical information is discussed in relationship to conducting field surveys Part one of the manual provides insight into the dynamics of food habits and consumption and its socio economic and cultural dimensions Part two gives practical information on small scale surveys to be carried out within the framework of a nutrition issue including data collecting on food habits and the measurement of food intake This manual addresses professionals with practical or academic training and those who are involved in various types of food and nutrition programmes or related activities It can also be used as a handbook in food and nutrition training courses at higher and at academic level
