Angela Montanari,Caterina Barone,Michele Barone,Anna Santangelo,2018-01-23 This Brief describes the chemical features of canned food products and gives background information on the technology of canning foods. It explains how canned foods are different from other packaged foods and illustrates and discusses their unique properties including risks and failures. Canned foods are usually considered to offer a particularly long shelf life and durability. An understanding of their properties and influences on their durability is therefore of great importance in the industrial production and this Brief offers a compact introduction to this topic. The authors focus on thermally preserved foods. They explain that the right choice of thermal treatment method e.g. pasteurisation, sterilisation as well as process parameters e.g. time, temperature is additionally influenced by criteria such as pH, water content, the presence and concentration of fatty molecules of calcium etc. So-called survival curves can help in determining the methodology of choice and the Brief introduces the reader to this concept. The authors also address defects and failures. They introduce selected indicators which can help identifying failures of the entire food packaging system and demonstrate how image and visual analysis can be applied in quality controls. The explanations and industrial production of canned foods are exemplified with the case of canned tomato sauces and beans.
