

Human Blood Cell Typing

What divided us, now unites?

Objectives

Use systematic observation to identify characteristic human blood cells and to compare to the literature. Record staining interactions with reagents of known specificity. Research and compare the results to your own to predict disease and their risk reduction for transfusion. Present and defend the data to a panel. Use logic and observation to solve a mystery that testing within family can help identify whether the one being tested is heterozygous or homozygous.

Table 1 – Red Blood Cells and Agglutination

	Person with Blood Type A	Person with Blood Type B	Person with Blood Type AB	Person with Blood Type O
Cells with attached antigens
Antibodies produced
Cells for the person's own blood agglutinate
Cells for the person's own blood do not agglutinate

- Identify whether the hemagglutination was characterized by clumping or absence of agglutination for the individual and the test blood cell.
- According to Table 1, how many blood types are forming the known antibodies?
  - How blood type?
- What shape is used in Table 1 to represent an antibody?
  - How (thought)?
- What hemagglutination's agent A agglutinated with how many B agglutinated with?
  - Type of red blood cell (type B agglutinated with A antigen, while type B red blood cells have B antigens on their surface)
