

The Hospice benefit is provided to beneficiaries with clinical evidence and descriptive notes to show the beneficiary is terminally ill and progressing in a manner that a physician would reasonably conclude that the beneficiary's life expectancy is months or less.

Importance of Descriptive Narratives in Clinical Records

Descriptive information completes the picture started with check-based assessments. Comparative information establishes longitudinal decline and may indicate decline suggestive of terminal status.

Each Clinical Note must be able to stand alone and show how the patient remains terminally ill or it may appear the patient has stabilized, becomes chronically ill and requires discharge planning to occur. Failure to document a distinct different will result in payment denial for a month, certification period or even an entire admission.

Surveyors appear to be focusing on severe, unrelenting symptoms as a basis for terminal status/medical necessity. Examples include: dyspnea at rest in patients with COPD or heart failure; and dysphagia with aspiration pneumonia in patients with dementia. Inconsistency decreases the clinical record's credibility in the eyes of reviewers and makes it harder for those trying to identify the patient's true clinical status and to defend your claims. Examples of inconsistency include:

- PPS assessments not supported by other assessment data in the clinical record
- Incorrectly applied FAST assessments and/or scores not supported by other assessment data
- Disparity between physician narratives and clinical information in the clinical record
- Lack of consistency in recording weights, anthropomorphic measurements, other objective data
- Absent or inconsistent data for a specific LCD has the appearance of disregard for or lack of awareness of the LCD which can also send up red flags.

Decline is inherent to the dying process in most diseases and most hospice staff are attuned to documenting the slightest signs. But decline is also associated with chronic conditions and advanced age. In denial statements, reviewers often state there is evidence of decline, but deny the claim because terminal status is not established.

Nursing narratives repeated verbatim across Clinical Notes, IDG Notes, and Plans of Care can have the effect of reducing credibility of documented assessments and narratives. This also may contribute to a clinical picture of stability for the patient. Documentation must support the patient's decline. Each Clinical Note must show evidence of signs and symptoms of decline despite optimal care.

Document using International Classification of Functioning: impairments in function, activity limitations, participation limitations, and communication impairment. Include in narrative documentation information about how so morbid conditions and secondary conditions affect the patient's decline. Consider ways to document which systems of the body are in a terminal condition.

Allow documentation to describe changes in a patient's health status. Compare historical assessment data with current assessment data and changes in the patient's functional status from the past to the most current assessment.

Clinical Notes from all disciplines should demonstrate a consistent picture of terminal. Avoid vague statements such as: "slow decline," "disease progressing." The more objective the documentation, the better. Remember: Hospice is for those needing true "skilled palliation of end of life symptomatology".

The Arc of Conversation Amy Shaw, PA, 2025-02-13 Intending to fill an important gap in medical training this book presents an easy to learn standardized approach to having compassionate and collaborative goals of care conversations with patients and families a skill that can be difficult for clinicians to learn and that is not part of standard medical education curricula Developed by a Palliative Care provider this is the first book to teach everything clinicians need to know to gently guide patients and families through what can often be difficult discussions about illness disease end of life wishes and hospice care This technique can be used to discuss any medical diagnosis or treatment be employed at any age or stage of an illness and can be used by health care professionals at any level Readers will be introduced to the patterns of decline patients follow toward the end of life criteria for recognizing when a patient s time is limited hospice care ground rules for compassionate communication and a step wise method of leading patients and families through difficult goals of care conversations in a collaborative way The book includes specific questions to ask and starter language clinicians can use for developing their own patient friendly talking points about disease progression the end of life concerns that a patient s time is limited advanced directives code status and hospice care An Arc of Conversation Guide for use when learning this technique is also included While modern medicine is terrific at acute stabilization of illness or injury it often ignores the elephant in the room disease progression and death By doing so the healthcare system frequently misses opportunities to align patient wishes with the care they receive Furthermore physicians often avoid difficult conversations with patients due to a lack of training or the assumption that hospice care represents medical or personal failure Incorporating the material and technique taught in The Arc of Conversation into everyday practice will enable clinicians to acknowledge and discuss patient decline and to confidently include hospice care as a viable option for treatment that can support patient values wishes and priorities Moving toward a continually collaborative approach with patients a shift away from physician directed care to patient centered care will enable clinicians to develop treatment plans that prioritize

Handbook of Supportive and Palliative

Radiation Oncology Monica S Krishnan, Margarita Racs, Hsiang-Hsuan Michael Yu, 2016-12-23 Handbook of Supportive and Palliative Radiation Oncology serves as a practical tool and rapid reference to assist radiation oncology practitioners in direct patient care with common palliative care issues. Containing the most recent advances in translational palliative care research, each chapter is organized in a succinct fashion to discuss major symptom burdens, suggested assessment and various management options. Each symptom and disease section is written to be a rapid practical guide for clinicians on the floor. The book starts with general approaches in palliative radiation oncology that are followed by a section that focuses on common symptoms in palliative care and their management. The next section of the book is devoted to site and disease specific evaluation, intervention and management. This handbook provides general guidelines and management recommendations for common clinical vignettes encountered by palliative radiation oncology practitioners and supported by palliative radiation oncology research. Concise references are cited to support treatment recommendation. Provides a quick reference for the busy clinician. Details standard of care resources for researchers of palliative and supportive care. Contains updated standards of care for palliative medicine and a list of common medications and dosages. Includes a comprehensive index by symptom and condition to facilitate quick reference. Documentation, 2007. This full color handbook is a quick reference guide to all aspects of documentation for every nursing care situation. It covers current documentation systems and formats including computerized documentation and features scores of sample filled in forms and in text narrative notes illustrating everything from everyday occurrences to emergency situations.
