Role of physics in our daily life

INTRODUCTION

We are living in the century of science and technology and introduction of science in our daily has transformed our lives. When people had no idea about science, even then their lives were governed by principles of different branches of science. When we light a fire, it is a chemical process; when we eat and digest food, it is biological process; when we walk on Earth, it is governed by laws of physics; when an Earthquake occurs, it's a seismic activity; when we talk about different terrains and gems of Earth surface, it is related to Geology. There is no single activity of our lives, which define our one or other field of science. Similarly, physics governs our everyday lives and is involved in a number of activities we perform and things we use in our daily life. Here we will discuss how physics is playing its part in running our everyday tasks and assists us to do our errands, chores and duties smoothly and effectively.

BODY

Physics is considered natural science because it deals with the things like matter, force, energy and motion. As these all are related to task related to everyday life, so, we can say that physics studies how the universe works, how Earth Moves around the sun, how lightening strikes, how our refrigerator works and many more. In short, physics define how everything works around us. When cannot separate anything from science and, our world cannot disconnect itself from the wonders of Physics. When we look around us, we can see a number of things that work on the principles of Physics. We can explain our several activities by making use of the knowledge of Physics. Here, we will discuss some of the example, which will help us to learn how physics is playing its part in our lives each day.

Walking

A number of principles of physics are involved in simple act of walking. It involves concepts of weight, Newton's three laws of inertia, friction, gravitational law and potential and kinetic energy. When we walk, we actually act like an inverted pendulum. When we put the foot on ground, it becomes our axis and our mass is centered in our abdomen, describing the shape of an arc. When we set foot on ground, we actually put weight i.e $w=mg$ and apply backward force on ground, as the response to our weight, ground responds by an opposing force which is vertical in nature, on leg which slows us down and this slowing process continues unless our leg comes nearest to our tummy. When leg is moving, kinetic energy is at maximum and potential energy is zero, but, when leg reaches nearest to belly or arc, potential energy reaches to its maximum. When another step is taken, the stored potential energy is converted to kinetic energy and this process continues. We act as an imperfect pendulum, because all potential energy is not converted into kinetic energy. Only 65 percent of energy is provided by stored potential energy to take next step, remaining 35 percent is provided by bio chemical processes. (Kunzig, 2001)

holes particle collisions and even the workings of gravity holds the potential to undermine our most basic understandings of physical reality If space isn't what we thought it was then what is it In Spooky Action at a Distance George Musser sets out to answer that question offering a provocative exploration of nonlocality and a celebration of the scientists who are trying to explain it Musser guides us on an epic journey into the lives of experimental physicists observing particles acting in tandem astronomers finding galaxies that look statistically identical and cosmologists hoping to unravel the paradoxes surrounding the big bang He traces the often contentious debates over nonlocality through major discoveries and disruptions of the twentieth century and shows how scientists faced with the same undisputed experimental evidence develop wildly different explanations for that evidence Their conclusions challenge our understanding of not only space and time but also the origins of the universe and they suggest a new grand unified theory of physics An important book that provides insight into key new developments in our understanding of the nature of space time and the universe It will repay careful study John Gribbin The Wall Street Journal An endlessly surprising foray into the current mother of physics many knotty mysteries the solving of which may unveil the weirdness of quantum particles black holes and the essential unity of nature Kirkus Reviews starred review

Life and Process Spyridon A. Koutroufinis, 2014-05-21 Alfred North Whitehead is arguably the most original 20th century philosopher of nature and metaphysics In recent decades a number of physicists have produced ground breaking new theories in fundamental physics influenced by his process philosophy In contrast few biologists are even aware that Whitehead's radical rethinking of the Cartesian assumptions implicit in 19th century sciences might be relevant to their enterprise This book seeks to fill this gap by exploring how Whitehead's process ontology might provide a new philosophical foundation for the biosciences of the 21st century The central premise shared by all of the volume's authors is the idea that all living processes are irreducible processes Each chapter focuses on assumptions implicit in some of the core concepts of biology such as organism evolution information and teleology that play crucial explanatory roles in the biosciences but as metaphysical concepts fall outside its purview The authors each identify important shortcomings implicit in contemporary biological paradigms and show how an approach grounded in a process oriented metaphysics can avoid them
