Kohler, 1982-05-31 This penetrating case study of institution building and entrepreneurship in science shows how a minor medical speciality evolved into a large and powerful academic discipline Drawing extensively on little used archival sources the author analyses in detail how biomedical science became a central part of medical training and practice The book shows how biochemistry was defined as a distinct discipline by the programmatic vision of individual biochemists and of patrons and competitors in related disciplines It shows how discipline builders used research programmes as strategies that they adapted to the opportunities offered by changing educational markets and national medical reform movements in the United States Britain and Germany The author argues that the priorities and styles of various departments and schools of biochemistry reflect systematic social relationships between that discipline and biology chemistry and medicine Science is shaped by its service roles in particular local contexts This is the central theme The author s view of the political economy of modern science will be of interest to historians and social scientists scientific and medical practitioners and anyone interested in the ecology of knowledge in scientific institutions and professions      Sessional Papers ,1920 Report of the Dominion fishery commission on the fisheries of the province of Ontario 1893 issued as vol 26 no 7 supplement      The Evolution of British Strategic Policy, 1919-26 John Robert Ferris,1989 A study of the connections between Britain s foreign financial and military policies during the 1920s calling for a radical reassessment of the perceptions of this critical period The author argues that Britain did not follow a single strategic policy but many different ones      *Sessional Papers ... of the ...
