The authors acknowledge the use of computer simulations and that future work should investigate other types of computer-simulated environments as well as other dimensions and all other computer-simulated tasks. Finally, the authors note that the Phonogram environment is more often considered using a particular effect of $Ph_{1/2}$ (e.g., frequency changes) but not for other effects. The authors are surprised that the other dimensions, especially duration, control $Ph_{1/2}$. They speculate that perhaps the other dimensions are more similar to the $Ph_{1/2}$ response than the frequency dimension. This hypothesis may be more or less correct, but the authors suggest that future work should be done.
