2. Another interesting question concerns a possible connection between the postulated cognitive states and the tendency to be gender-biased. Some studies have shown that men are more likely than women to be gender-biased, but the underlying mechanisms of this gender effect remain unclear (e.g., Wentura et al., 2000).

It is important that the computer business is made of independent companies, not a few big ones, so that the small business can survive and grow. The industry is not yet big enough to be a monopoly, and it is not yet big enough to be a cartel.

It is necessary and important to ensure that all future training course participants are encouraged to provide high-quality course feedback. This will ensure that the course continues to be relevant and effective, and that the course is able to meet the needs of the participants. It is also important to ensure that the course is able to meet the needs of the participants in a timely and effective manner. This will ensure that the course is able to provide the best possible training experience for all participants.

and concerning the existing state of affairs and finally, a summary of the results of the study for the past 10 years, and some ideas for improvement for the future program, particularly Japanese. I think that the first two are the most important ones, the second is somewhat more important and the third is the least important one, but all three are very important and should be included in the report.
