

Homeostasis (pp. 74-83)

Organisms develop internal mechanisms, often hormonally-mediated, to maintain internal homeostasis.

A regulated variable must be maintained within a normal range of values, relative to set point, or baseline, level.

List 4 examples of regulated variables (body homeostasis):

- 1) Temperature
- 2) Ion balance and composition of body fluids
- 3) Glucose level in blood stream
- 4) Blood Pressure

Homeostasis is described as a state of homeostatic balance.

Homeostasis is a negative feedback mechanism.

Regulated variable is restored to normal range following a change deviating from normal (disturbance) and the variable is restored to normal state.

Regulated variable is restored to normal state following a change deviating from normal.

A disturbance deviates or departs the variable from the normal range. Homeostasis returns the regulated variable to the normal range.

In the body, signals maintain constant body composition and send signals to a specific homeostatic system. They determine whether change deviates disturb or depart from the body composition or the disturbance is from the set point.

Receptors detect or detect the disturbance or departure of the regulated variable.

Regulated variable deviates or departs and the body sends signals to the system.

Receptors detect the disturbance.
