Development in Southern Africa Ajuruchukwu Obi, 2011-04-27 The Southern Africa region has experienced more than its fair share of problems in recent years Just when it seemed that the hardships wrought by the devastating cycle of droughts and floods of 2000 to 2002 were a thing of the past other problems emerged At one level there have been the weak and often erratic governance mechanisms and political crises in some countries of the region leading to severe disruptions in agricultural production to the point that supplies and markets have virtually disappeared At another level socio cultural rigidities have often militated against the adoption of efficient farming practices resulting in sub optimal choices that lock smallholders into a low equilibrium trap In the face of the disappearing supplies and missing markets these have engendered hyper inflationary trends of a magnitude unknown anywhere else in the world But in the midst of all this apparent dreariness cases are emerging from which immense lessons can be drawn This book assembles a collection of research papers based on studies completed in 2008 and 2009 in Southern Africa that examine various dimensions of the institutional constraints small farmers are facing in the region and how they are going about dealing with them The papers draw from these diverse and polar experiences and present some theoretical and practical insights that should form the basis for more in depth country level sector specific analyses focusing mainly on citrus horticultures cotton and livestock The thematic issues of income inequality land reform natural resource management and value chain governance and chain choice are covered in this book and are expected to be of interest for a wide constituency including researchers development practitioners rural animators and policy makers

The Political Economy of HIV in Africa Deborah Johnston, Kevin Deane, Matteo Rizzo, 2018-10-18 Biomedical revolutions seem to have radically altered the environment for HIV transmission anti retrovirals ARVs and drugs to reduce mother to child transmission promise to cut HIV transmission rates as does male medical circumcision However the hopeful messages of UNAIDS are tempered with warning about expenditure shortfalls and calls for funding Contributions to this book remind us that along with the external financial constraints there have been new fractures in state power and in the organisation of health systems More than this the book fundamentally calls into question whether biomedical interventions can change the social roots of this disease As well as considering new policy approaches the book reasserts a long standing political economy approach to HIV and to adapt it to reflect new competing theoretical approaches The chapters attempt to connect the debates about HIV AIDS to larger discussions about globalisation class differentiation inequity and uneven development in African countries This book was originally published as a special issue of Review of African Political Economy

Economics and HIV Deborah Johnston, 2013-05-29 This book explains how and why economics has been applied to a terrible pandemic using a range of examples mostly drawn from the region most affected sub Saharan Africa Part I shows that microeconomic approaches have found fertile ground in a public health approach that blames individual choices for HIV transmission Despite their attractiveness however these approaches fail to explain contemporary patterns of HIV prevalence illustrating the importance of factors that are excluded from the standard micro economic approach Part II of the book looks at our problems in understanding the economic impact of AIDS and explains why economists cannot agree if epidemic disease is a good or bad thing for economic development In both sections of the book the potential for alternative approaches is shown and the book ends by arguing that a political economy approach can bring meaningful insights to our understanding of the spread and impact of HIV AIDS

Gender in Southern Africa Ruth E. Meena, 1992 This book is a result of concerns and views expressed by participants at a Gender Planning Workshop which was organised by the SAPES Gender Project in July 1991 The contributions in this collection are essentially posing issues and questions which have not been handled by mainstream scholarship The authors are challenging women and men to liberate mainstream scholarship from its male biases which limit our understanding of socio economic and political processes which have contributed to the underdevelopment of this region

Boosting growth to end hunger by 2025: The role of social protection Wouterse, Fleur Stephanie, Taffesse, Alemayehu Seyoum, 2018-10-23 Social protection programs public or private initiatives that aid the poor and protect the vulnerable against livelihood risks can effectively be used to assist those trapped or at the risk of being trapped in chronic poverty These programs aim to address chronic poverty through redistribution and protect vulnerable households from falling below the poverty line Although investments in social protection programs are often motivated by equity concerns they can also contribute to economic growth by for example encouraging savings creating community assets and addressing market imperfections Despite their potential and proliferation not enough is known about social protection programs in Africa The 2017 2018 Annual Trends and Outlook Report ATOR reduces this knowledge gap by focusing on the potential of such programs on the continent and the corresponding opportunities and challenges The chapters of the Report highlight the benefits of these programs not only to their direct recipients but also others in the community through spillover effects They also underscore the importance of appropriate design and sustainability to fully realize the potential of social protection programs
