

THE DECISION

On June 13, 1966, the United States Supreme Court ruled differently than the Arizona Supreme Court. It held that providing Miranda's confession as evidence violated his constitutional rights under the 5th and 6th Amendments.

The 5th Amendment protects from self-incrimination and requires the police to inform the defendant about his or her rights while the 6th Amendment guarantees criminal suspects rights to a personal or state-funded attorney.

Chief Justice Earl Warren announced that the court permitted confessions in self-incriminating statements in criminal trials only when suspects heard their defendants after police inform of their rights.

THE IMPORTANCE OF MIRANDA V. ARIZONA

To protect an individual 5th and 6th Amendment rights in the face of widespread ignorance of the law, the Courts have devised statements that the police are required to tell a defendant who is being detained and interrogated. These mandatory statements are called "Miranda's requirements".

THE MIRANDA WARNING

It is required to be read when an individual is detained by the police and before police ask questions about an alleged criminal act.

The warning read when a person is read the Miranda Warning, also known as being "Mirandized," is as follows:

1. You have the right to remain silent.
2. Anything you say can and will be used against you in a court of law.
3. You have the right to an attorney.
4. If you cannot afford an attorney, one will be appointed for you.

Because some of these rights were afforded to Ernesto Miranda and his "confession" was thus constitutionally admitted as trial, his conviction was reversed. Miranda was later retried and convicted without the admission of his confession.

Miranda v. Arizona, in creating the "Miranda Rights" over late for grand-jury, recorded the existing police process of the state with the basic rights of individuals. Miranda remains good law today.

Ernesto Miranda, the defendant in Miranda v. Arizona, was later retried and convicted without the admission of his confession.
