A History of the Apocalypse Catalin

Negru,2015-11-12 Religion For thousands of years this thing has dictated which people should live and which people should die what shape our buildings should have or what colors our garments should contain what food people should eat or what words people should speak If religion is the opium of the masses then beliefs about the end of the world are like overdoses People touched by such beliefs no longer rely on a hidden personal and intimate god contemplated upon from the safe distance of the beating human heart They live with the promise of divine intervention at a grand scale on the current coordinates of space and time This can be an exceptional motivator and a game changer in terms of civil obedience both at an individual and collective level In the name of an immediate and palpable deity people can commit shocking cruelties However such belief can also account for some of the most exceptional social developments in human history

History as Literature in Byzantium Ruth Macrides,2016-12-05 Although perceived since the sixteenth century as the most impressive literary achievement of Byzantine culture historical writing nevertheless remains little studied as literature Historical texts are still read first and foremost for nuggets of information as main sources for the reconstruction of the events of Byzantine history Whatever can be called literary in these works has been considered as external and detachable from the facts The classical tradition inherited by Byzantine writers the features that Byzantine authors imitated and absorbed are regarded as standing in the way of understanding the true meaning of the text and furthermore of contaminating the reliability of the history Chronicles whose language and style are anything but classicizing have been held in low esteem for they are seen as providing a mere chronological exposition of events This book presents a set of articles by an international cast of contributors deriving from papers delivered at the 40th annual Spring Symposium of Byzantine Studies They are concerned with historical and visual narratives that date from the sixth to the fourteenth century and aim to show that literary analyses and the study of pictorial devices far from being tangential to the study of historical texts are preliminary to their further study exposing the deeper structures and purposes of these texts
