

FINDING PRIMARY SOURCES

WHAT ARE PRIMARY SOURCES?

Primary sources are materials written or created by someone who participated in or witnessed the events described. They reflect the individual point of view of the participant or observer. Researchers use primary sources to obtain accurate information about what actually happened during an historical event or time period. (Secondary sources are explained on page 4 of this guide.)

The items described below are examples of primary sources that are useful to researchers:

1. Diaries, journals, speeches, interviews, letters, memos, manuscripts, and other papers in which individuals describe events in which they were participants or observers.
2. Memoirs and autobiographies. These may be less reliable than diaries or letters since they are usually written long after events occurred and may be distorted by bias, dimming memory, or the revised perspective that may come with hindsight. On the other hand, sometimes they are the only sources available for certain information.
3. Oral history interviews provide important primary information for historians. Whether the interview is formal or informal, this type of research often provides unique and enlightening perspectives.
4. Records of or information collected by government agencies. Official records (births, deaths, marriages; permits/licenses; census data; etc.) document conditions in the society.
5. Records of organizations. The minutes, reports, correspondence, etc. of an organization or agency serve as an ongoing record of the activity and thinking of that specific group.
6. Published materials (books, magazine, journal, and newspaper articles) written about a particular event at the time it happened. These may be accounts by participants, but in most cases they are written by journalists or other observers. It is important to distinguish between reports written at the time of an event and material written much later as historical analysis.
7. Materials that document the attitudes and popular thought of a historical period. If you want to find evidence of the mentality of an era, or of a group (a world view, a set of attitudes, or the popular perception of an event or condition), an obvious source is public opinion polls taken at the time. Since these are limited in availability and in what they reveal, it is also helpful to make use of ideas and images conveyed in the mass media, and in literature, film, popular fiction, textbooks, etc. These sources, written or produced at the time, should be used as evidence of how people were thinking.
8. Photographs, audio or video recordings, and films that document an event.
9. Research data such as anthropological field notes, the results of scientific experiments, and other scholarly activity of the time.
10. Artifacts of all kinds: physical objects, buildings, furniture, tools, appliances, household items, clothing, toys, etc.

Williams, 2019-02-19 This book will provide empirical evidence of blunders committed by firms from small developing countries that operate in developed country markets It will identify lessons that managers who are looking to do business in international markets can learn in order to lessen the mistakes in markets that are psychically distant Consumer Preferences and Acceptance of Food Products Derek V. Byrne, 2020-12-01 The acceptance and preference of the sensory properties of foods are among the most important criteria determining food choice. Sensory perception and our response to food products and finally food choice itself are affected by a myriad of intrinsic and extrinsic factors. The pressing question is how do these factors specifically affect our acceptance and preference for foods both in and of themselves and in combination in various contexts both fundamental and applied. In addition, which factors overall play the largest role in how we perceive and behave towards food in daily life. Finally, how can these factors be utilized to affect our preferences and final acceptance of real food and food products from industrial production and beyond for healthier eating. A closer look at trends in research showcasing the influence that these factors and our senses have on our perception and affective response to food products and our food choices is timely. Thus, in this Special Issue collection, Consumer Preferences and Acceptance of Food Products, we bring together articles which encompass the wide scope of multidisciplinary research in the space related to the determination of key factors involved linked to fundamental interactions, cross-modal effects in different contexts and eating scenarios as well as studies that utilize unique study design approaches and methodologies.

The Cognitive Neuroscience of Attention Joseph B. Hopfinger, Scott Slotnick, 2020-12-17. Attention refers to our ability to selectively process the vast array of stimuli impinging upon our senses at every moment. The mental processes of attention are critical for allowing us to maintain focus and complete tasks efficiently even within distracting environments. The brain mechanisms of attention have been studied for decades yet much still remains unknown and consensus on core issues remains elusive. A unique aspect of this book are chapters that highlight recent debates on critical issues in attention research. Each of these chapters includes a comprehensive discussion paper that is followed by peer commentaries and an author's responses. These debates include whether attention can modulate activity of even the earliest cortical processing region and whether changes in white matter are critical for plasticity-related effects of attention training. In addition to these discussion chapters, the book presents cutting-edge research on some of the newest theories of attentional control and selective attention including the influence of practice, epigenetics, reward, social interaction and distractor suppression. These studies employ advanced cognitive neuroscience methods such as neurostimulation, functional neuroimaging, pattern analysis and the evaluation of oscillatory brain activity to shed light on the brain mechanisms underlying attention. The chapters in this book were originally published as articles in various issues of the journal Cognitive Neuroscience.

Neonatal Neural Rescue A. David Edwards, Denis V. Azzopardi, Alistair J. Gunn, 2013-04-04. Worldwide more than one million babies die annually from perinatal asphyxia and its associated complications such as neonatal encephalopathy, one of the major causes of cerebral palsy and cognitive deficiencies in children aside from prematurity. Cooling the head or the entire body minimizes neuronal death, enabling the neonatal brain to be rescued, thus greatly improving developmental outcomes. Hypothermic neural rescue therapy has revolutionized the treatment of this condition and is a major recent achievement in neonatal medicine. This landmark book provides a brief scientific underpinning of hypothermic neural rescue therapy and lays out the evidence base for good.
