

relatively attractive stipendiary nature, but I am attracted to the profession because I am intrinsically motivated to help people. As noted earlier, I have a rich profile of voluntary work. I have volunteered as a Pharmacy Assistant for Interfaith Medical Center-Brooklyn, NY. I have also volunteered in a Respiratory Care Unit, Nursing Unit, and Donor Registration Assistant and Safety monitor for various organizations across New York. Being involved in voluntary work presented me with an opportunity to interact with patients suffering from various ailments first hand. I was particularly sparked with the pharmacist assistant position as it presented with a much needed chance to experience what it means to become a pharmacist; the experience was memorable and only served to cement my deathless desire to become a pharmacist. The voluntary positions together with the job placements that I have held before (Home Health Aid, Library Assistant, and Office Assistant) have greatly helped me improve my communication skills. I understand that for any pharmacist, effective communication skills are indispensable since without these, one is not able to communicate with the patients. Currently I possess effectual communication skills (both written and spoken) that enable me communicate effectively with all and sundry. Additionally, the placements as well as the voluntary opportunities helped realize the importance of building special relationships and trust with all the patients; I understand that Service delivery in pharmacy is grossly dependent such special relationships and trust with patients.

Getting accepted to pursue Doctors degree in pharmacy will open a new chapter of my life. I am committed to making the new experiences that accompany my admission into the doctor of pharmacy program attention-
