

Exercise 1: Culture and Communication

1. Importance of Culture in International Communication

- a) Intercultural communication involves both verbal and non-verbal communication and mediated culture.
 - Understanding the cultural context and beliefs, values, and customs is crucial for effective communication. Mediated culture refers to the communication through media, which can influence cultural perceptions and behaviors.
- b) Verbal communication is essential.
 - Language and communication style play a significant role in international communication. Understanding cultural differences in communication is essential for effective communication. For example, in some cultures, direct communication is preferred, while in others, indirect communication is more common.

2. Cultural Differences in Communication: Examples and Implications

- a) In the international communication context, specific cultural differences are evident in communication styles and behaviors.
 - Individualism vs. Collectivism: Individualistic cultures (e.g., USA, UK) value personal achievement and autonomy, while collectivist cultures (e.g., Japan, China) value group harmony and social cohesion.
 - High-context vs. Low-context: High-context cultures (e.g., Arab, Asian) rely on implicit communication and context, while low-context cultures (e.g., USA, Germany) rely on explicit communication and context.

3. Cultural Differences in Communication: Examples and Implications

- a) Cultural differences in communication can lead to misunderstandings and conflicts.
 - In the international communication context, specific cultural differences are evident in communication styles and behaviors.
