

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each time a person enters the room, the computer generates a number between 1 and 100 randomly. Sometimes, every time the person enters, it shows the same value. The first time the ball rolled, it was 1 and another 100 times, the computer never generated a new number. It kept showing 1 because that ball rolled. That number happened to appear the most often in that experiment.

However, the distribution was not uniform, and the computer kept the generated number and generated another 100 unique random numbers using the same random generator. The number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment, meaning that the number 100 was the most likely to appear, according to the law of large numbers. However, every time the ball rolled, it was 1, so that number, 1, did not appear, following the law of large numbers.

The numbers 1 and 100 were the only numbers that appeared the most often in that experiment. However, for the number 1, the ball rolled, meaning that the number 1 was the most likely to appear. The number 100 appeared the most frequently in that experiment, meaning that the number 100 was the most likely to appear. And the computer generated numbers through randomness.

Therefore, the ball rolled the most often in that experiment, and the number 100 appeared the most often in that experiment. Therefore, the number 100 was the most likely to appear.

The number 100 was the most likely to appear in that experiment. The number 100 was the most likely to appear in that experiment. The number 100 was the most likely to appear in that experiment.

Therefore, the number 100 was the most likely to appear.

Therefore, the number 100 was the most likely to appear.

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS The first part of the passage states that the number 100 was the most likely to appear in that experiment.
