

4) Study Sources E and F.

Does Source F prove Source E is wrong? Use details of the sources and your knowledge to explain your answer. (9)

Candidate style answer

There are some problems with Source E but overall Source F does not prove it is wrong.

First of all, Source E is written by Sylvia Pankhurst. She was a campaigner for women's suffrage, so she was emphasising how hard the women worked. She uses emotive language like 'horrid atmosphere' and 'so terrible were the verminous fumes'.

However, Source F has even more problems with it. The language of this source seems to be exaggerated. She talks about dancing to work and leaping out of bed on a frosty morning. This seems a bit unlikely. She is also just one woman, and she is upper class so her view is not really typical of the majority of women who worked in munitions factories.

I also know that in these factories women got diseases like phony jaw and yellow skin. This suggests Source F is untypical and supports the points made in Source E.

So overall, Source F does not prove Source E is wrong because it is just one woman and her experience does not fit with what most women went through.

Examiner's commentary

High Level Response

This is a sensible opening statement, making clear what the candidate is going to say. This is always a good idea.

The candidate does a good job of evaluating Source F, using the language and tone of the source and also considering the purpose of the source. This takes the answer to a high level almost immediately.

The candidate then does an even better job on Source F, using language and tone, typicality and contextual knowledge to evaluate the source and question its validity compared to Source E.

Effective evaluation of both sources with a convincing judgement takes this answer to the top level.
