

Management in Action: Case Study 3

Google's Strategy for Dominance

"We don't talk about our strategy ... because its strategic. I would rather have people think we're confused that let our competitors know what we're going to do."

-Larry Page, Google Co-founder

Sergey Brin and Larry Page met at Stanford University in 1995 when both were graduate students in computer science. At that time, Page was working on a software-development project designed to create and index of websites by scouring sites for key words and other linkages. Brin joined him on the project, and when they were satisfied that they'd developed something with commercial value, they tried to license the technology to other search companies. As luck would have it, they couldn't find a buyer and settled instead of procuring enough investment capital to keep refining and testing their product.

In 2000, Brin and Page ran across a discussion of a business model based on the concept of selling advertising in the form of sponsored links and search-specific ads. They adapted it to their own concept and went into business for themselves. They named their new venture as Google and, as you probably know, it has grown to become the world's largest search engine. Google generally processes more than 11,300 million searches a month by a user base of 380 million people in 181 different countries and using 146 languages. Following an IPO in 2004, the company's market capitalization rose steadily; it stood at more than $ 243.65 billion by 2012, when Google controlled 66.7 percent of the U.S. search market (compared to Yahoo!'s 12.1 percent and Microsoft's 16.3 percent).

Is the Answer Christina T. Russo, Cathy Swan, 2015-01-22 Today's tech savvy and digitally connected students present a new challenge for today's school librarians. This book offers the 21st century tools and know how necessary for educators to appeal to and challenge students to learn and to want to learn. What are the best ways to motivate students to become engaged and develop a passion for learning? Can appealing to their desire for socialization and constant communication attributes of their lives outside of education via the integration of cutting edge technologies and new media in the library or classroom serve to ignite creativity, curiosity and critical thinking? This book shows how you can make use of non traditional tools such as popular social networks, collaborative technologies and cloud computing to teach information and communications technologies integrated with the school curriculum to improve student learning and demonstrates how these same technologies can help you measure skills and mastery learning. The book provides an easy to follow blueprint for using collaborative techniques, innovation and teaching for creativity to achieve the new learning paradigm of self directed learning such as flipping the classroom or library. Readers of this book will find concrete step by step examples of proven lesson plans, collaborative models and time saving strategies for the successful integration of American Association of School Librarians AASL standards. The authors, both award winning teachers, explain the quantitatively and qualitatively measurable educational value of using these technologies for core curricular and information and communications technologies instruction, showing that they both enhance student learning outcomes and provide data for measuring their impact on learning.
