

PHYSICS 2000: LENSES, REFLECTIONS AND REFRACTIONS LAB 10: OPTICS

OBJECTIVE

To study the reflection of light on flat and curved surfaces, and refraction of light through different media, and to find the focal length of a convex lens.

EQUIPMENT

PHYS 2000 Standard Lighting Unit, Optical Bench and Accessories and Standard Lens.

PHYS 2000 Standard Geometric Optics

For flat, curved and plane mirrors, convex and concave lenses and refraction experiments.

This standard unit is the fundamental for carrying out your experiment. Also, the reflect (Physics 2000) and the Standard Lighting Unit, Optical Bench and Accessories.

THEORY

Light can be considered as a beam, or ray, that travels in straight lines if the wave of disturbance propagates within them by reflection or refraction. When a light ray travelling in one medium hits the interface between a different medium, part of it is reflected back into the same medium (according to the law of reflection) and the other part is refracted (or transmitted) part of the light will enter the medium, and the direction will change. This process is called as reflection, according to reflection follows the law of reflection.

Law of Reflection is given in Figure 1, showing that when a light ray strikes a surface, the angle of incidence, θ_i , is equal to the angle of reflection, θ_r . Both angles are measured from the normal, the perpendicular to the surface. This is true for flat as well as curved surfaces. Curved surfaces which bulge outward called convex, while those that bulge inward are called concave. If the surface is spherical or circular, then the reflecting ray may either converge to a point (focus or focus point) or diverge from a point (focus point).

(a) in Figure 1, the red line shows light rays that reflect from a convex surface.
