Bruce Rinker,2004-09-28 The treetops of the world's forests are where discovery and opportunity abound however they have been relatively inaccessible until recently This book represents an authoritative synthesis of data anecdotes case studies observations and recommendations from researchers and educators who have risked life and limb in their advocacy of the High Frontier With innovative rope techniques cranes walkways dirigibles and towers they finally gained access to the rich biodiversity that lives far above the forest floor and the emerging science of canopy ecology In this new edition of Forest Canopies nearly 60 scientists and educators from around the world look at the biodiversity ecology evolution and conservation of forest canopy ecosystems Comprehensive literature list State of the art results and data sets from current field work Foremost scientists in the field of canopy ecology Expanded collaboration of researchers and international projects User friendly format with sidebars and case studies Keywords and outlines for each chapter

The Climate Near the Ground Rudolf Geiger,Robert H. Aron,Paul Todhunter,2009 This revised and updated edition of Rudolf Geiger's classic text provides a clear and vivid description of the surface microclimate its physical basis and its interactions with the biosphere The book explains the principles of microclimatology and illustrates how they apply to a wide array of subfields Those new to the field will find it especially valuable as a guide to understanding and quantifying the vast and ever increasing literature on the subject Designed as an introductory text for students in environmental science this book will also be an essential reference for scientists seeking a clear understanding of the nature and physical basis of the climate near the ground and its interactions with the biosphere

Recent Advances in the Modeling of Hydrologic Systems D.S Bowles,P. Enda O'Connell,2012-12-06 Modeling of the rainfall runoff process is of both scientific and practical significance Many of the currently used mathematical models of hydrologic systems were developed a generation ago Much of the effort since then has focused on refining these models rather than on developing new models based on improved scientific understanding In the past few years however a renewed effort has been made to improve both our fundamental understanding of hydrologic processes and to exploit technological advances in computing and remote sensing It is against this background that the NATO Advanced Study Institute on Recent Advances in the Modeling of Hydrologic Systems was organized The idea for holding a NATO ASI on this topic grew out of an informal discussion between one of the co directors and Professor Francisco Nunes Correia at a previous NATO ASI held at Tucson Arizona in 1985 The Special Program Panel on Global Transport Mechanisms in the Geo Sciences of the NATO Scientific Affairs Division agreed to sponsor the ASI and an organizing committee was formed The committee comprised the co directors Professor David S Bowles U S A and Professor P Enda O Connell U K and Professor Francisco Nunes Correia Portugal Dr Donn G DeCoursey U S A and Professor Ezio Todini Italy

Biotic Stress and Yield Loss Robert K.D. Peterson,Leon G. Higley,2000-12-28 Understanding biotic stress and plant yield allows for the practical development of economic decision making an instrumental part of Integrated Pest Management And further the impact of biotic injury on plant yield bears directly on the basic biological questions of population dynamics life history strategies community structure plant stress

This book is designed to give students rapid and easy access to key ecological material to assist learning and revision Key topics such as populations and interactions ecosystems population genetics community patterns and many more are structured into manageable sections each cross referenced to allow easy navigation through the information

Sustainability of Agroecosystems Alexandre De Oliveira,2018-08-22 The present book is composed of modern theoretical and applied studies that highlight the core principles and evidence of sustainable agriculture This work is systematically divided into two sections which summarize crucial insights into this theme such as agroecological concepts case studies soil health and agroforestry systems The chapters included in this book have been written by researchers whose expertise allows the relatively complex sustainable agroecosystem related topics to be easily understood by any reader Therefore the target audience comprises not only scholars and specialists in the field but also common people and enthusiasts about this theme Such chapter s collection is certainly a valuable resource about agricultural sustainable principles and a pleasure reading for those who are willing to dive more deeply into the study of sustainability of agroecosystems The Bioclimatology of Frost ,2012-12-06 The economic costs of frosts in agriculture and horticulture in many parts of the world can be very significant Reports in the media include accounts on how frosts have devastated coffee crops in Brazil or in Papua New Guinea and how frosts have seriously damaged the Florida citrus industry Frost may cause losses in current harvests or a decline in future yields through more permanent damage to trees and bushes Damaging frosts may occur as infrequent short term events with sub zero temperatures or with unusually severe winter temperatures which extend over long periods In this book we have aimed at providing a comprehensive review of recent advances in the area of frost research The stimulus for writing this book has come from the recognition that there is a shortage of recent texts which deal exclusively with the bioclimatology of frost Bioclimatology deals with the relations between climate and life and the present text is particularly concerned with the effects of low temperatures on plants Our purpose has been to assist researchers engineers extension officers and students in understanding the physical aspects of frost occurrence and frost distribution as well as the biological and phenological

aspects of frost damage and to provide an overview of direct and indirect methods of frost protection and prevention

Northern Forested Wetlands Ecology and Management Carl C. Trettin, 2018-12-19 Forested wetlands are a major component of northern landscapes important both for their ecological functions and their socioeconomic values Historically these lands have been used for timber and fiber products hunting fishing trapping food gathering and recreation There are many questions about the use and management of these lands in the future particularly with respect to forest products hydrology and water quality plant and wildlife ecology landscape dynamics and wetland restoration Northern Forested Wetlands Ecology and Management provides a synthesis of current research and literature It examines the status distribution and use of these wetland resources The book focuses on understanding the role of wetlands in the landscape and on how to manage these wetlands and sustain their important functions This is a primary reference text for the study and management of northern forested wetlands providing a forum for information discovered by researchers and managers from many nations
