

33 Looking Northwest

A wagon train musters for the westward trail. The wagons took the name of the Pennsylvania valley where they were first built: Conestoga.

western land and they didn't. So they finally got Virginia and Georgia and some other big states to cede—or give up—all claims to western lands. It was agreed that those western lands—if they ever had enough people—would also become states.

Then, in 1787, the Confederation Congress passed the Northwest Ordinance. (An ordinance is a law passed by a government.) If you got the impression that the Congress under the Articles of Confederation was a total washout, that isn't quite true. Without Virginia to claim it, that land was like a colony belonging to the 13 states. Now colonies throughout history had always existed for the benefit of the mother country. The Americans certainly knew all about that! Because of their own bad experience with Great Britain, they didn't want to take advantage of others. So the Northwest Ordinance was based on equal rights for the territories. It was based on fairness.

Maryland was being difficult, and so was Rhode Island. They just weren't going to let big Virginia hog everything. They certainly weren't going to cooperate as long as the large states had Massachusetts farmer Daniel Shays fought in the Revolution. After the war, bad weather, hard times, and high taxes left farmers broke. In 1786, Shays and 1200 farmers, armed mostly with pitchforks, marched on a Massachusetts court and forced it to adjourn. Then they headed for an armory.

This "rebellion" convinced George Washington and others that the Articles of the Confederation needed changing. Jefferson said Shay's rebellion was "medicine necessary for the sound health of government." Others thought it treason.
