Milton, 2014-04-01 Much of the current debate about education too often resembles the blind men describing an elephant apprehending only a particular part of the situation or the process many analysts tell an evocative but incomplete story The so called reform discussion proceeds with a lack of depth about the nuances and realistic limitations in the institutional order of school This book argues that as regulation of schools moves further up the bureaucratic hierarchy first to state departments of education then to the national department of education the legal and institutional requirements get more intensive but less concretely useful in class rooms This bureaucratization serves to tighten the organizational environment thereby increasing the risk of normal accidents The increasing governmental management in other words makes it more likely that schools will fail to meet their goals Analyses of education are too often developed for public consumption in a fast moving political world This book examines some of the deeper organizational reasons why things don t work so well in school as well as a look at some of things that do work Most importantly the book will explain how the social and cultural expectations of what schools can do may create unrealistic hopes We as a society and schools as institutions embrace these unreasonably high hopes at our collective peril Check out Andrew s latest interview with Seattle Radio <http://kiroradio.com/listen/9972862>

Citizen Participation at the Local Level in China and Canada Andrew Sancton, Chen Zhenming, 2014-11-13 What if anything is similar about citizen participation at the local level in Canada and China The answer of course is politically sensitive There are many in Canada who would claim that the question is absurd How can there be meaningful citizen participation in a country where there are significant restrictions on political activity including on the right to form organizations with political purposes Presenting the work of leading scholars Citizen Participation at the Local Level in China and Canada examines how citizens in each country participate at the local level The book examines the development of citizen participation in local governance in Canada and China respectively It then covers the characteristics of political culture and climate on local participation highlighting factors especially unique to urban poor class migration and aboriginal and immigrant populations The chapters also explore means of protest demonstration and articulation of preference by populations and issues where citizen participation has effected change such as land use housing urban development and resource sustainability The book includes case studies that compare Canadian and Chinese communities and extrapolate interesting policy level changes at the local level based on citizen behavior and involvement It underscores the similarities and differences in political participation in both countries and sets the stage for the steps in the citizen participation in both countries
