Industry's Voice in Health Policy Richard H. Egdahl, Willis B. Goldbeck, Diana C. Walsh, 2012-12-06 It is a pleasure to introduce this special volume of the Industry and Health Care Series It is special for the best of reasons it is primarily written by industry representatives Using the Washington Business Group on Health 1978 Annual Meeting as its starting point this volume captures the feelings concerns and experience of many who are leading industry's increasingly significant presence in health policy and economics While many of the largest companies achieve more sophisticated levels of involvement the fact remains that most companies of all sizes and especially the smaller businesses either will not or cannot devote the time or resources to become active participants We hope this volume will help demonstrate the value of even one person's commitment Although our organizational focus is Washington the WBGH recognizes that in the long run the quality and cost of the health care most Americans receive will be and should be determined at the local level To let this happen without industry involvement would represent an abdication of both responsibility and opportunity Fortunately we see a growth of industry involvement growth not just in terms of numbers but also in terms of the scope of activities Recognizing that the key to changing provider behavior is to change the economic incentives emanating from the major payers em vi Preface players are subjecting their employee benefit plans to the most complete scrutiny in many years Health manpower legislation--1975 United States. Healthcare System Failures Victor Healey, AI, 2025-02-21 Healthcare System Failures examines the critical failures within public healthcare systems highlighting the connection between flawed policies and epidemiological realities It argues that these failures aren't isolated incidents but predictable outcomes of systemic weaknesses For instance inadequate funding models and regulatory gaps often lead to disparities in access to care affecting public health outcomes and driving up healthcare costs The book emphasizes the urgent need for evidence based policy reforms to address inequalities and improve health outcomes for all using epidemiological data to highlight the burden of disease This book uniquely links policy shortcomings to epidemiological data providing a robust assessment of healthcare system performance It begins by defining core concepts and metrics then progresses through analyses of policy failures and epidemiological data It concludes by offering practical recommendations for policy reforms emphasizing data driven decision making and community engagement By drawing from economics sociology and political science Healthcare System Failures provides a holistic understanding of the complex factors contributing to these failures Title List of Documents Made Publicly Available, 1986 Health Care Financing Review, 1995 Update on Glaucoma Research: From Basic Science to Clinical Practice Alessio Martucci, Maria Dolores Pinazo-Duran, Carlo Nucci, 2025-03-12 Glaucoma is one of the leading causes of global irreversible blindness It is characterized by a progressive loss of retinal ganglion cells with corresponding optic nerve alterations and visual field loss. The pathophysiology of glaucoma is multifactorial and there are several clinical phenotypes. Diagnosis of glaucoma is not always straightforward. Glaucoma slowly damages the eyes causing irreversible injury before there is any vision loss which implies that a large number of glaucoma patients remain undiagnosed leading to blindness. Elevated intraocular pressure (IOP) is recognized as a major risk factor for the development and progression of glaucoma and lowering IOP is currently the primary strategy of treating the disease. However, new medical treatment strategies such as neuroprotectors and para-surgical or surgical treatments have been proposed. Numerous clinical trials evaluating either medical, surgical or behavioral interventions are being conducted around the world to study glaucoma with the aim of improving its diagnosis, management and treatment.
