

ANSWERS AND EXPLANATIONS

Each week, the group of students meets to discuss a particular chapter. Chapter one comes first and continues throughout every lesson for the entire year. At the end of every lesson, the class does not discuss chapter two content, but that conversation comes up afterward when a student asks a question about it. Another day later, they talk about "that" lesson frequently through the entire 18-week class period.

Although the conversations with the students about the book occur, the group does not discuss the chapter content, but always focuses on the chapter content. Each week, the group discusses the chapter content and then moves on to the next chapter. The group does not discuss the chapter content, but always focuses on the chapter content.
