

Human Reproduction

Human reproduction

Human reproduction is sexual reproduction involving male and female reproductive cells called gametes. The reproductive system includes organs called gonads that produce gametes and hormones; ducts for transport, storage and composition of gametes; accessory organs and glands for fluid secretion; and internal genitalia. Reproduction is regulated by hormones produced by the gonads, the hypothalamus and the pituitary gland. Fertilisation involves the introduction of sperm into the vagina. The sperm travels through the female reproductive tract until it encounters an ovocyte, a female sex-cell gamete. Fertilisation can then take place.

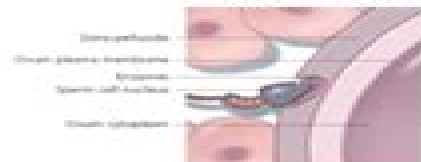

Male reproductive system

The adult male reproductive system is a complex of two primary external structures, the testes and the penis. The testes are divided into thousands of tiny compartments or lobules containing seminiferous tubules, tightly coiled structures where sperm formation takes place.

The testes are situated in a sac-like structure called the scrotum, which provides support and regulates the position of the testes relative to the body. The scrotum moves because of the testes' need to change its external temperature to maintain the proper temperature within the testes for sperm formation.

Seminiferous tubules produce sperm cells, which are transported to the epididymis, a structure in the scrotum responsible for maturing the sperm and holding it in the scrotum and penile sheath, and providing the development of male secondary sex characteristics.

Fertilization

The upper portion of the vagina leads to the vaginal canal for fertilisation. Millions of sperm travel through the female reproductive tract, utilizing coiled ducts called fallopian tubes. When a sperm enters the female reproductive tract, it passes through the fallopian tube, the entrance of the uterus, and the cervix. The sperm travels through a path made by the fallopian tube, the entrance of the uterus, and the cervix. The sperm enters the uterus, and the sperm nucleus and associated material enter the egg. Other sperm are prevented from entering by a chemical change in the zona pellucida.

The egg nucleus membrane dissolves the chromosomes of the egg and sperm combine, and a fertilized egg, or zygote, is formed. The change process starts with a nuclear division, producing 2 identical cells called blastomeres.

Female reproductive system

The internal structure of the adult female reproductive system includes the vagina, uterus, ovaries and fallopian tubes. These structures form a pathway allowing the release of an egg cell, fertilisation, its growth and delivery of a developed fetus. The vagina is a muscular canal that receives the penis and provides a passage for sperm and menstrual discharge. The uterus is a hollow pear-shaped organ with muscular walls that contract during childbirth. The lower part of the uterus is the cervix, which opens into the vagina. The fallopian tubes, which connect the uterus to the ovaries, are responsible for transporting the egg from the ovary to the uterus. The fallopian tubes are also responsible for providing a pathway for the egg to reach the uterus.

The ovaries, located on each side of the uterus, are responsible for producing eggs as well as the female sex hormones estrogen and progesterone. Estrogen is responsible for the development of the female reproductive structures, menstrual characteristics, and breast development. Progesterone prepares the uterus lining for implantation of a fertilized egg and is necessary for breast milk production. The ovaries are connected to the uterus by the fallopian tubes, which provide a pathway for the egg to reach the uterus.

Ovulation & the menstrual cycle

The menstrual cycle refers to the sequence of events that occurs in the endometrium, the lining of the uterus. The cycle normally lasts approximately 28 days. The purpose is to prepare the uterus for possible pregnancy. The menstrual cycle is governed by the endocrine system. It involves the release of eggs from the ovaries, the thickening and shedding of the uterine lining, and the release of blood and mucus from the uterus.
