There appears to be something odd in the above discussion. The above results suggest that the impact of a shock on output is small, but the impact on the interest rate is large. This is not what we would expect from a standard IS-LM model. In a standard IS-LM model, a shock to the interest rate would have a large impact on output, and a small impact on the interest rate. This is not what we see in the above results. This suggests that the IS-LM model is not a good approximation of the economy in the above case.
