¹ The Government of India had earlier a centrally run and staffed health service, called the Government Medical Service, which was abolished in 1947. The Government Medical Service was replaced by the Government Medical Services, which were run by the provinces. The Government Medical Services were abolished in 1952 and replaced by the Government Medical Services, which were run by the provinces.

1. The first step in the process of creating a new product is to identify a market need. This involves conducting market research to understand what consumers want and what problems they are facing. Once a need is identified, the next step is to develop a concept that addresses this need. This is often done through brainstorming sessions and the creation of a prototype. The concept is then refined through further research and development, leading to the creation of a final product. The final step is to launch the product into the market and monitor its performance, making adjustments as needed.
