Koenig, 1972 A computer program titled GENENG is described The program uses component performance maps to enable the user to do analytical steady state engine cycle calculations Through a scaling procedure each of the component maps can be used to represent a family of maps different design values of pressure ratios efficiency weight flow etc Either convergent or convergent divergent nozzles may be used Included is a complete FORTRAN IV listing of the program Sample results and input explanations are shown for one spool and two spool turbojets and two spool separate and mixed flow turbofans operating at design and off design conditions The computer program is available from the authors Liquid Rocket

Engine Rene Nardi Rezende, 2018-11-15 The great engineering achievement required to overcome most of the challenges and obstacles that prevented turning rocket design from art into science took place in Europe and the United States between the 1930s and the 1950s With the vast majority of the engines currently in operation developed in the pre computer age there are new opportunities to update the design methodologies using technology that can now handle highly complex calculations fast The space sector with an intense focus on efficiency is driving the need for updating adapting or replacing the old modeling practices with new tools capable of reducing the volume of resources and the time required to complete simulations and analysis This book presents an innovative parametric model applicable to the project of some elements of the liquid rocket thrust chamber with the level of detail and accuracy appropriate to the preliminary design phase It addresses the operating characteristics and dimensioning of some thrust chamber elements through a set of equations and parameters which include thrust or propellant characteristics The model degree of sophistication was adjusted to the requirements of the Project Life Cycle Phase B while also enabling quick analysis of new configurations from changes in initial project parameters
