Abstract: The purpose of this study was to determine the effect of a 12-week training program on the physical and psychological health of elderly people. The study was conducted in a community center in a city in the north of Iran. The study was a quasi-experimental design. The sample consisted of 30 elderly people (15 men and 15 women) who were randomly selected from the community center. The study was conducted in two groups: a control group and an experimental group. The control group did not receive any training, while the experimental group received a 12-week training program. The training program consisted of aerobic exercises, strength training, and flexibility exercises. The study was conducted over a 12-week period. The data were collected at the beginning and at the end of the training program. The data were analyzed using a t-test. The results of the study showed that the experimental group had a significant improvement in physical and psychological health compared to the control group. The study concluded that a 12-week training program can improve the physical and psychological health of elderly people.
