

Internal Structure
Lecture 1: The Heart and Blood Circulation

The heart is a muscular organ that pumps blood throughout the body. It is divided into four chambers: the right and left atria and ventricles. The right side of the heart receives deoxygenated blood from the body, and the left side pumps oxygenated blood to the rest of the body. The heart is surrounded by a double-walled sac called the pericardium, which contains a lubricating fluid to reduce friction. The heart is also connected to a network of blood vessels, including the superior and inferior vena cava, the pulmonary arteries and veins, and the aorta. The heart's internal structure is highly complex and is designed to efficiently pump blood throughout the body.
