

Chapter 2: The Founding and the Constitution Study Guide

Chapter 2 Topics & Goals:

The First Founding: Interest and Conflicts

Describe the events that led to the Declaration of Independence and the Articles of Confederation

- the acts from the King (taxation without representation)
- tariffs, duties, and taxes on commerce
- political strife and radicalization of the colonists
- Boston Tea Party: most merchants just wanted to rescind the Tea Act, other rebels wanted to break away from Britain completely; resulted in the convening of the First Constitutional Congress
- developed the Declaration of Independence
- in 1776 the Second Continental Congress writes the Declaration of Independence
- assertion that "unalienable rights" that include life, liberty, and the pursuit of happiness could not be abridged by government (influenced by John Locke)
- the declaration focused on unification of the colonial groups
- created in 1777, lasted until 1789
- goal was to limit the powers of central government
- power of central government was limited to congress
- given the power to make war and peace, treaties and alliances, coin and borrow or regulate trade
- limits on congress made it impossible

The Second Founding: From Compromise to Constitution

Analyze the reasons why many Americans thought a new Constitution was needed, and assess the obstacles to a new Constitution

- The Annapolis Convention: international weakness and domestic turmoil improve and reform the Articles of Confederation. 55 attended and 39 would sign the new constitution
- Shay's Rebellion: farmer led a rebellion to prevent the foreclosures of the debt-ridden farms, resulted in the Annapolis Convention
- Constitutional Convention: political strife, international embarrassment, national weakness, and local rebellion. Economic interest was a large motivator
- The Great Compromise 1787: corrections and enlargements to the Articles of Confederation. Virginia Plan - a framework for the constitution, introduced by Edmund Randolph, that called for representation in the national legislature based on the population of each state. New Jersey Plan - a framework for the Constitution, introduced by William Patterson, that called for equal state representation in the national legislature regardless of population
- Great Compromise - the agreement reached at the Constitutional Convention of 1787 that gave each state an equal number of senators regardless of its population but linked representation in the House of Representatives to population
- Three-fifths compromise: states owned slaves, and some wanted them to count towards the population so as to get more representatives, others didn't believe that slaves counted as people
- Three-Fifths Compromise - the agreement reached at the Constitutional Convention of 1787 that stipulated that for the purposes of the apportionment of congressional seats, only three-fifths of slaves would be counted

The Constitution

Explain how the Constitution attempted to improve America's governance, and outline the major institutions established by the Constitution

- reinforce the unity of the mercantile and planter forces that sought to create a new government
- sought a new government that would be strong enough to promote commerce and protect property
- sought to prevent "excessive democracy"
- Bicameral - having a legislative assembly composed of two chambers or houses; distinguished from unicameral
- Checks and Balances - mechanisms through which each branch of government is able to participate in and influence the activities of the other branches; presidential veto power of congressional
