Fitness Measures and Health Outcomes in Youth Institute of Medicine, Food and Nutrition Board, Committee on Fitness Measures and Health Outcomes in Youth, 2013-01-10 Physical fitness affects our ability to function and be active. At poor levels it is associated with such health outcomes as diabetes and cardiovascular disease. Physical fitness testing in American youth was established on a large scale in the 1950s with an early focus on performance-related fitness that gradually gave way to an emphasis on health-related fitness. Using appropriately selected measures to collect fitness data in youth will advance our understanding of how fitness among youth translates into better health. In Fitness Measures and Health Outcomes in Youth the IOM assesses the relationship between youth fitness test items and health outcomes, recommends the best fitness test items, provides guidance for interpreting fitness scores, and provides an agenda for needed research. The report concludes that selected cardiorespiratory endurance, musculoskeletal fitness, and body composition measures should be in fitness surveys and in schools. Collecting fitness data nationally and in schools helps with setting and achieving fitness goals and priorities for public health at an individual and national level.

Pediatric Fitness Grant R. Tomkinson, Tim Olds, 2007-01-01 Over the years there has been much controversy regarding whether today's children and adolescents are fitter than their peers of the past and whether they are fitter if they live in the more affluent than the less affluent countries. This publication starts by examining data cumulated since the late 1950s on secular trends and geographic variability in pediatric fitness test performances of children and adolescents from 23 countries in North America Europe Asia Australasia Africa and the Middle East There is evidence that there has been a global decline in pediatric aerobic performance in recent decades relative stability in anaerobic performance and that the best performing children come from northern and central Europe It finishes by considering possible causes including whether declines in aerobic performance are the result of distributional or across the board declines and whether increases in obesity alone can explain the declines in aerobic performance Physical educators exercise sport scientists exercise physiologists personal trainers pediatricians medical practitioners and public health providers will find useful information in this book on secular trends and geographic variability in pediatric fitness
