Assessing Revising and Editing Best Practices for Teaching Beginnings and Endings in the Psychology Major

Dana Dunn, 2010-01-12 Introductory and capstone experiences in the undergraduate psychology program are crucial ways to engage students in their major and psychology department impart realistic expectations and prepare them for life beyond college. Providing the right orientation and capstone courses in psychology education is increasingly a concern of instructors, department chairs, program directors and deans, and both types of courses have become important sources for gathering pre and post coursework assessment data for degree learning outcomes. The strategies presented here have been designed to help educators examine issues around teaching the introductory or careers course and developing a psychology specific orientation program. The authors also provide concrete suggestions for building capstone experiences designed to fit the needs of a department, its pedagogical philosophy or the educational agenda of the college or university. Undergraduate psychology curriculum designers and instructors can benefit from learning innovative and effective strategies for introducing the major to first year students and at graduation for bringing closure, reinforcing the overall departmental learning outcomes and helping students apply their disciplinary knowledge in capstone experiences and post graduate life. In this collection of articles, psychology instructors involved in the improvement of teaching and learning review the research and share their own successes and challenges in the classroom. Discussions include effective practices for helping students become acclimated to and engaged in the psychology major, application of developmental knowledge and learning communities to course design and use of quality benchmarks to improve introductory and capstone courses. Other chapters describe innovations in the design of stand alone courses and offer concrete advice on counseling psychology graduates about how to use what they have learned beyond their higher education experiences. Critical Writing Gerald Nosich, 2021-03-17 The main goal of Critical Writing is to provide students with a set of robust, integrated critical concepts and processes that will allow them to think through and write about a topic in a way that is built on and permeated by substantive critical thinking. This step by step guide shows how to construct a thesis statement and the other main points that constitute the structure of the paper, how to write the paragraphs that make up the body of the paper, how to engage in productive research in a planned, self directed way, how to make a point clear, not just grammatically or stylistically but also how to clearly convey ideas to an audience, how to think your way through the numerous unanticipated issues, including aspects of grammatical correctness, transitions and many others that arise while writing papers. Each step provides close and careful processes for carrying out each of these tasks through the use of critical thinking. Tackling Your First College Paper: A Fresh Perspective Pasquale De Marco, 2025-05-01 Tackling Your First College Paper: A Fresh Perspective is the ultimate guide to writing your first college paper.
