Have you ever had a friend stab you in the back? If you have, you know how much it hurts. In the storybook, Fox, Margaret Wild and Ben Brooks explore the idea of true friendship and what happens when a friend betrays another. Specifically, in the text, Fox, Wild and Brooks show readers that a true friend is a loyal friend and someone who never turns his or her back on a friend.

In the text, Fox, Dog always stands by his friends and consequently shows that a true friend is a loyal friend. For example, when Maggie's wing is burnt, Dog tries to help her and when she doesn't want Dog's help he waits until she is ready. Specifically, in paragraph 8 not only does Dog wait for Maggie to awake for a whole week, but he also -persuades her to go with him to the riverbank- so he can show her that life can go on. In addition, when Maggie wishes to turn her back on Fox, Dog says, -He's all right. Let him be.- This shows that Dog stands by his friends.

Another reason Wild and Brooks show readers a true friend is a loyal friend is that Fox is disloyal to both Maggie and Dog and therefore he is a fake friend. In paragraph 18, Fox tells Dog and Maggie they looked -extraordinary- when they were running together. However, while he said kind words, Fox was secretly planning a way to break up Maggie and Dog's friendship. For instance, after he persuades Maggie

Writing and Learning in Cross-national Perspective David Foster, 2017-10-03 Despite the increasingly global implications of conversations about writing and learning, U.S. composition studies has devoted little attention to cross-national perspectives on student writing and its roles in wider cultural contexts. Caught up in our own concerns about how U.S. students make the transition as writers from secondary school to postsecondary education, we often overlook the fact that students around the world are undergoing the same evolution. How do the students in China, England, France, Germany, Kenya, or South Africa, the educational systems represented in this collection, write their way into the communities of their chosen disciplines? How, for instance, do students whose mother tongue is not the language of instruction cope with the demands of academic and discipline-specific writing? And in what ways is U.S. students' development as academic writers similar to or different from that of students in other countries? With this collection, editors David Foster and David R. Russell broaden the discussion about the role of writing in various educational systems and cultures Students development as academic writers raises issues of student authorship and agency as well as larger issues of educational access institutional power relations system goals and students roles in society The contributors to this collection discuss selected writing purposes and forms characteristic of a specific national education system describe students agency as writers and identify contextual factors social economic linguistic cultural that shape institutional responses to writing development In discussions that bookend these studies of different educational structures the editors compare U S postsecondary writing practices and pedagogies with those in other national systems and suggest new perspectives for cross national study of learning writing issues important to all educational systems Given the worldwide increase in students entering higher education and the endless need for effective writing across disciplines and nations the insights offered here and the call for further studies are especially welcome and timely
